An Investigation of Mandatory Fees for Educational Activities in California's Public Schools

LIBERTY | JUSTICE | EQUALITY

The American Civil Liberties of Southern California

Introduction

Our nation's public schools represent the highest and most revolutionary ideal of American democracy — that through education open on an equal basis to all, every child can achieve his or her full potential as consequence of merit and hard work. The California Constitution, like the constitutions of every state in the Union, accordingly entitles the children of this State to a free and equal education. Since 1879, Article IX, Section 5 of the California Constitution has required that the State provide a system of free public schools. In 1984, the California Supreme Court ruled unequivocally in Hartzell v. Connell that public schools cannot charge students or families any fees as a condition for participating in “educational programs,” including extracurricular activities.

In response to reports from parents that schools in Southern California were charging students mandatory fees as a condition for participating in academic courses and school-sponsored activities, the ACLU of Southern California began investigating this practice. What started as a limited inquiry into a few school districts grew into a statewide investigation that found there is no system of free public education in California: public schools throughout the State openly ignore this constitutional right by requiring students to pay fees and purchase assigned materials for academic courses and for school-sponsored extracurricular activities.

This report details the results of our investigation, which uncovered more than 50 public school districts in which at least one high school acknowledges on its website that students must pay fees in order to participate in educational programs. The illegal fees schools are charging students include: requiring students to purchase required text and workbooks for academic courses, charging lab fees for science classes, charging material fees for fine arts classes, requiring students to purchase school-issued P.E. uniforms, and charging students hundreds, and in some cases thousands, of dollars to participate in extracurricular activities.

Our investigation was far from comprehensive. We conducted a random sampling of websites for public high schools that covered well under half of the public high schools in California. Additionally, we learned during the course of our investigation about fees charged at schools that are not included in this report, because there was not an active website link documenting the mandatory fee as of August 27, 2010.

Thus, the findings in this report are just the proverbial tip of the iceberg. They underscore how the State has abdicated its constitutional role to safeguard students' constitutional right to a free and equal education by doing nothing as its public school districts openly violate the free schools guarantee. Additionally, school districts' pursuit of this plainly illegal funding stream highlights just how seriously the State's failure to provide adequate resources to our public schools — including massive budget cuts the last two years — undermines the ability of schools to offer educational programming that we as citizens expect our public schools to provide.

The remainder of this report consists of a chart listing the illegal fees school charge for educational programs, split into two categories: (1) mandatory fees related to academic courses and (2) mandatory fees for extracurricular activities.
