Civic Learning Award Overview

PURPOSE

“The success of our nation and state depends on educated, informed and active citizens and residents . . . For all students in California to have access to a continuum of civic learning experiences starting in kindergarten—and to effectively respond to equity issues—we must embed robust civic learning throughout the K–12 experiences, both within and beyond school walls.”
—California Task Force on K–12 Civic Learning, Revitalizing K–12 Civic Learning in California: A Blueprint for Action (August 2014), pp. 6, 30. <http://www.cde.ca.gov/eo/in/documents/cltfinalreport.pdf>.

OBJECTIVE

To celebrate schools' efforts to engage students in civic learning and to identify effective and replicable civic learning models in California.

AWARDS FOR PUBLIC ELEMENTARY, MIDDLE, AND HIGH SCHOOLS

Civic Learning Award of Excellence. Top-scoring schools receive a visit from the Chief Justice of California, a plaque, and an invitation to a California Gold Ribbon Award Banquet.

Civic Learning Award of Distinction. High-scoring schools receive a visit from an appellate court justice, a plaque, and an invitation to a California Gold Ribbon Award Banquet.

Civic Learning Award of Merit. Mid-scoring schools receive recognition from a local judicial officer.

SELECTION PROCESS AND RESEARCH-BASED PRACTICES IN CIVIC LEARNING

The application asks schools to describe their civic learning practices and programs, with an emphasis on those that incorporate research-based areas of effective civic education, as described in the Guardian of Democracy: The Civic Mission of Schools (PDF) report from the Leonore Annenberg Institute for Civics of the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania and the Campaign for the Civic Mission of Schools. A panel of experts from California will assess the applications for both depth and breadth of civic learning.

Six Research-Based Proven Practices in Civic Education

These proven practices are provided by the Guardian of Democracy: The Civic Mission of Schools report, from the Leonore Annenberg Institute for Civics of the Annenberg Public Policy Center at the University of Pennsylvania, the Campaign for the Civic Mission of Schools, the Center for Information and Research on Civic Learning and Engagement at Tufts University, the American Bar Association Division for Public Education, and the National Conference on Citizenship. Full copies of the report are available at <https://www.carnegie.org/publications/guardian-of-democracy-the-civic-mission-of-schools/>. Schools are encouraged to examine the rubric for more guidance on how to show evidence of the proven practices.

PROVEN PRACTICE #1: Discuss current local, national, and international issues and events in the classroom, particularly those that young people view as important to their lives. When young people have opportunities to discuss current issues in a classroom setting, they tend to have greater interest in politics, improved critical thinking and communications skills, more civic knowledge, and more interest in discussing public affairs out of school. Conversations, however, should be carefully moderated so that students feel welcome to speak from a variety of perspectives. Teachers need support in broaching controversial issues in classrooms because they may risk criticism or sanctions if they do so.

PROVEN PRACTICE #2: Design and implement programs that provide students with the opportunity to apply what they learn through performing community service that is linked to the formal curriculum and classroom instruction. Service programs are now common in K–12 schools. The ones that best develop engaged citizens are linked to the curriculum and:

- Consciously pursue civic outcomes, rather than seek only to improve academic performance or to promote higher self-esteem;
- Allow students to engage in meaningful work on serious public issues, and give students a role in choosing and designing their projects;
- Provide students with opportunities to reflect on the service work;
- Allow students—especially older ones—to pursue political responses to problems consistent with laws that require public schools to be nonpartisan; and
- See service learning as part of a broader philosophy toward education, not just a program that is adopted for a finite period in a particular class.

PROVEN PRACTICE #3: Offer extracurricular activities that provide opportunities for young people to get involved in their schools or communities. Long-term studies of Americans show that those who participate in extracurricular activities remain more civically engaged than their contemporaries even decades later. Thus, everyone should have opportunities to join school groups, and such participation should be valued.

PROVEN PRACTICE #4: Encourage student participation in school governance. A long tradition of research suggests that giving students more opportunities to participate in the management of their own classrooms and schools builds their civic skills and attitudes. Thus, giving students a voice in school governance is a promising way to encourage all young people to engage civically.

PROVEN PRACTICE #5: Encourage students' participation in simulations of democratic processes and procedures. Recent evidence indicates that simulations of voting, trials, legislative deliberation, and diplomacy in schools can lead to heightened political knowledge and interest.

PROVEN PRACTICE #6: Provide instruction in government, history, law, and democracy. Formal instruction in U.S. government, history, and democracy increases civic knowledge. This is a valuable goal in and of itself and may also contribute to a young person's tendency to engage in civic and political activities over the long term. However, schools should avoid teaching only rote facts about dry procedures, which is unlikely to benefit students and may actually alienate them from politics.
